Morton Haack, who designed all wardrobe for "Planet of the Apes" last year, will function in a similar capacity on "Planet of the Apes Revisited," Arthur P. Jacobs' sequel to the Charlton Heston starrer, which goes before the 20th Century-Fox camera in mid-April. Haack planed into Hollywood this week after an assignment in Milan re-designing male costumes for La Scala Opera's production of "Othello."

William Creber, art director on Arthur P. Jacobs' 1968 production, "Planet of the Apes," has been engaged by the filmmaker for a similar chore on the upcoming 20th Century-Fox sequel to the simian cinema, "Planet of the Apes Revisited." Creber has just completed art direction of "Justine" at the same studio.
